Regional housing alliance gets $60,000 grant

The Regional Housing and Community Development Alliance has received a $60,000 grant from the Fannie Mae Foundation in Washington, D.C., for general operating support.

The St. Louis-based RHCDA is a not-for-profit organization that provides technical assistance, residential development services and other development resources to communities in the metro area. The organization has helped develop more than 900 housing units in the area with a development cost of $127 million in the last five years.
